Glo. Tush that was in thy rage:
Speake it againe, and euen with the word,
That hand which for my loue did kill thy loue,
Shall for thy loue, kill a farre truer loue,
To both their deaths thou shalt bee accessary.
La. I would know thy heart.
Glo. Tis figured in my Tongue.
La. I feare mee both are false.
Glo. Then neuer man was true.
La. Well, well, put vp your sword.
Glo. Say then my peace is made.
La. That shall you know hereafter.
Glo. But I shall liue in hope.
La. All men I hope liue so.
Glo. Vouchsafe to were this ring.
La. To take is not to giue.
Glo. Looke how this ring incompasseth thy finger,
Euen so thy brest incloseth my poore heart.
VVere both of them for both of them are thine
And if thy poore supplyant may
But beg one fauour at thy gracious hand,
Thou doest confirme his happinesse foreuer.
La. What is it?
Glo. That it would please thee leaue these sad desines
To him that hath more cause to bee a mourner,
And presently repaire to Crosby place,
Where after I haue solemnely enterred
At Chertsie Monastery this noble King,
And wet his graue with my repentant teares,
I will with all expedient duty see you:
For diuers vnknowne reasons, I beseech you
Grant mee this boone.
La. With all my heart, and much it ioyes me too,
To see you are become so penitent:
Tressill and Bartly, goe a long with mee.
Glo. Bid me farewell.
La. Tis more then you deserue:
But since you teach mee how to flatter you,
Imagine I haue sayd farewell already Exit.

Glo. Sirs, take vp the course.
Ser. Towards Chertsie noble Lord?
Glo. No to white Fryers there attend my
Was euer woman in this humour woed? Ex
Was euer woman in this humour wonne
Ile haue her, but I will not keepe her long
What? I haue kild her husband and her fat
To take her in her hearts extreamest heate:
With curses in her mouth, teares in her eye
The bleeding witnesse of her hatred by:
Hauing God, her conscience, and these barre
And I nothing to backe my sute withall
But the plaine Diuell and dissembling look
And yet to win her all the world is nothing
Hath shee forgot already that braue Princ
Edward her Lord, Whom I some three mo
Stabd in my angry mood at Tewxbury?
A sweeter and louelier Gentleman,
Framd in the prodigality of nature:
Yong, valiant, wise, and no doubt right roya
The spacious world cannot againe affoord
And will shee yet debace her eyes on mee,
That cropt the golden prime of this sweet P
And made her widdow to a woefull bed
On me, whose all not equals Edwards mo
On me that halt, and am vnshapen thus?
My Dukedome to bee a beggerly denier,
I doe mistake my person all this while,
Vpon my life she finds although I cannot
My selfe, to bee a marualous proper man,
Ile bee at charge for a Looking-glasse,
And entertaine some score or two of tailo
To study fashions to adorne my body,
Since I am crept in fauour with my selfe,
I will maintaine it with a little cost.
But first ile turne yon fellow in his grau
And then returnè lamenting to my loue.
Shine out faire sunne, till I haue brought a g
That I may see my shadow as I passe.
